

OUTGOING PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Timing Is Everything: Reflections on My Year As ICEP President

Edward J. Ward, MD, MPH, FACEP

As I complete my year as president of ICEP, the phrase "Timing is everything" keeps going through my head. Timing truly is everything. This certainly defines my personal life as it does my career in medicine and my-time spent serving on the ICEP Board of Directors.

In the last year, we have made great strides to ensure the financial strength of our chapter.

Years ago, we decided to purchase larger office space. At the time, this made very good sense, as we had truly outgrown our offices in Oakbrook Terrace. We provided administrative infrastructure to IMERT and with the number of staff members sharing space, people were working on top of each other. We were also having difficulty putting on educational meetings with the high expenses of hotel conference centers and catering.

Given our needs, grant availability and perceived financial strength, we made the decision to purchase our current offices in Downers Grove. I was on the Board at the time and supported this decision. The year was 2008.

Shortly after we made the move, America entered the worst economic downturn since the great depression. Later, our ties with IMERT were severed and our attempts to sell the Oakbrook Terrace property were stymied by the tanking office real estate market. There was a great deal of discussion and tough decision making.

I began my year as president with the concern that we would not be able to refinance our loans and that this would be the end of ICEP as we knew it. I am proud to say that that will not be our legacy.

Late last year, we were able to successfully sell the Oakbrook Terrace property. This step alone has helped greatly by eliminating the costs of carrying an empty building. At about the same time, we were able to favorably refinance the mortgage on the Downers Grove property.

We are currently in better financial shape than we have been in years. While no one can accurately predict what economic twists and turns await, I am confident that there will be institutional memory within ICEP of the trials we have endured to guide future decision making.

Outgoing President Dr. Edward Ward passes the gavel to incoming President Dr. David Griffen at the 2014 Spring Symposium & Annual Business Meeting on May 1 at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Griffen has done a great job chairing the Finance Committee and I believe he will be a great president.

The other unique bit of timing, as it applies to the last year, is the enactment of the Affordable Care Act. While there is great debate as to the long-term effects of this monumental change in the delivery of health care, as an emergency medicine physician I am in favor of expanded medical coverage.

I will routinely state that one of the things I like best about being an EM doctor is that I really don't care what type of insurance, if any, you have. I am just going to do the best I can regardless of what you have or don't have. While I truly believe coverage does not impact the individual patient care encounter in the ED, it certainly does once I discharge them.

Our goal as a nation is to improve health care cost, quality and access. The ACA is taking us into uncharted territory in a different direction than the doomed path we have been on. Our position as the safety net is well assured. While the question of how we will be supported in our mission is unclear, this is an excellent time to be in emergency medicine. We provide value.

The final bit of timing that I have benefitted from is the Board members that I have worked with over the past seven years. My mom used to say "you don't get smart by hanging around with dummies," usually in reference to various friends she (rightfully) disapproved of.

Being on the ICEP Board has put me into close contact with centuries of emergency medicine experience. Most of these individuals were prior mentors and now respected colleagues. Thank you all for the patience and instruction you have given me. This experience has been transformative for me. It is my intention to provide the same to others as I continue my career.

Lastly, I want to thank the ICEP staff. It has been my honor to work with this dedicated group of professionals. Over the years, I have heard others speak about their extreme level of commitment to our chapter and can only echo the gratitude they deserve. While it is time for me to pass the gavel, I will be always in your debt for support, guidance and friendship.

Sincerely,

— Edward J. Ward, MD, MPH, FACEP

Geriatric Emergency Dept. Guidelines Released

A new set of guidelines was recently published to outline how to set up programs and deliver health care to the growing geriatric population.

The Geriatric Emergency Department Guidelines document is the product of two years of consensus-based work that included representatives from the American College of Emergency Physicians, The American Geriatrics Society, Emergency Nurses Association, and the Society for Academic Emergency Medicine. The guidelines have been approved by the Boards of Directors of all four organizations.

The purpose of these Geriatric Emergency Department Guidelines is to provide a standardized set of guidelines that can effectively improve the care of the geriatric population and which is feasible to implement in the ED.

The guidelines create a template for staffing, equipment, education, policies and procedures, follow-up care, and performance improvement measures. It addresses various problems common in aging patients, including delirium, falls, medication management, catheter use and dementia. Download the guidelines from ICEP.org/geriatricguidelines.

A goal of the geriatric ED as recommended in the guidelines is to recognize those patients who will benefit from inpatient care, and to effectively implement outpatient care to those who do not require inpatient resources. To implement most effectively, the geriatric ED will utilize the resources of the hospital, ED, and inpatient as well as outpatient resources.

Geriatric emergency patients represent 43 percent of hospital admissions. On average, geriatric patients stay longer in the emergency department, use more resources and are significantly more likely to require social services. Widespread adoption of the guidelines is expected to more effectively allocate health care resources and improve patient care. Similar programs designed for other age groups (pediatrics) or specific diseases (heart attack, stroke, trauma) have improved care both in individual emergency departments and system-wide, resulting in more cost-effective care and better patient outcomes.

“Our advice to health care systems with limited resources is to make the entire emergency department a geriatric emergency department,” said Mark Rosenberg, DO, FACEP, chair of ACEP's task force for geriatric ED guidelines. “If the ER is designed for the most frail and vulnerable, it will work for the strongest patients as well.”

ICEP Participating as Charter Member of Governor Quinn's Alliance for Health

ICEP is one of more than 80 stakeholders to participate as a charter member of Illinois' Alliance for Health, a collaborative program created by Governor Pat Quinn with the goal of ensuring access to affordable, high-quality health care for the citizens of Illinois.

The governor's office established the Alliance for Health to undertake a comprehensive planning effort to achieve the agency's goals, known as the "triple aim":

1. Improve the health status of people and their communities
2. Improve the efficiency and effectiveness of clinical care
3. Reduce costs to make health care affordable

The Alliance is made up of health policy makers, health care providers, insurers, payers, public health professionals, small and large businesses, and community development advocates. It developed out of a six-month planning grant awarded from the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Innovation. It is led by Michael Gelder, Senior Health Policy Advisor to Governor Pat Quinn and Executive Director of the Governor's Office of Health Innovation and Transformation.

Efforts of the Alliance over the past year and a half were to produce a statewide innovation plan that is outlined by five transformation principles or objectives:

1. Create comprehensive, integrated delivery systems, along with payment reforms to support them.
2. Ensure additional supports and services for people with specific needs.
3. Enhance public health efforts focusing on environmental and social factors that negatively affect large segments of the population.
4. Ensure an adequate workforce that has the appropriate education, training and compensation to staff integrated delivery systems and enhance public health.
5. Expand the state's leadership role in promoting continuous improvement in public health and health care systems.

These objectives are the result of consensus from the stakeholders, including ICEP, who worked to develop the plan. Each objective is defined by specific key innovations developed to help accomplish the plan's goals.

The charter organizations, including ICEP, are working together to implement the innovations and recommendations developed to date.

The Governor's Office of Health Innovation and Transformation is currently forming workgroups to discuss implementation of the Alliance Innovation Plan. Workgroups are:

- Long Term Services and Supports
- Delivery System Reform
- Data and Technology
- Workforce
- Public Health Integration

ICEP will provide updates about progress made by the Alliance for Health. To read the full details of the Innovation Plan, visit <https://www2.illinois.gov/gov/healthcarereform/Pages/GO-HIT.aspx>
