

Sean Schnarr, MD

Dr. Sean Schnarr is a fourth-year resident physician in Emergency Medicine at John H. Stroger Jr. Hospital of Cook County. He developed a passion for both education and medicine while he was an undergraduate at Seton Hall University. While completing his undergraduate studies he helped found WitnessHope, a Nonprofit organization that organized youth sports and nutrition clinics in Accra, Ghana.

Dr. Schnarr completed his medical degree at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City. He has been active in medical student mentoring and education through both the Student National Medical Association and the Latino Medical Student association. His future goals are to continue refining his skills both as a physician and as an educator in Emergency Medicine while mentoring underrepresented students and physicians in the medical field.